REQUIRE PERMIT TO ALTER WATERWAY OF STREAMS ABLE TO FLOAT WATERCRAFT

The Maine Fish and Game Department warns that aquatic life can be greatly disturbed by indiscriminate altering of waterway changes in streams and rivers.

Lyndon H. Bond, chief of the Fishery Division, said that there have been instances reported again this year where waterflow changes have had a direct, harmful effect on fish populations. "For that reason, it is extremely important that careful consideration be given before any such action is undertaken," he said.

The responsibility for issuing permits to allow bulldozing, dredging or filling along the banks of streams or rivers now comes under the commissioner of the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Game.

The relatively new statute originally was part of the Great Ponds Act, but has been transferred by the Legislature to the Fish and Game Department.

The law reads: "Whoever bulldozes, causes to be bulldozed, fills or dredges between the banks of a river, stream or brook capable of floating watercraft, without first obtaining permission from the commissioner of the Fish and Game Department shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000."

The law goes on to explain that this does not apply to crossings in connection with public works projects "which shall alter not more than 200 feet of shore (on either side) nor to private crossing or dam projects which shall not alter more than 100 feet of shore."

BRIGHT AND CLEAR WEATHER FOR MOLLYOCKETT DAY

For the first time in three years, Mollyockett Day, the 22nd day of July, dawned bright and clear. A fine crowd watched the parade with its numerous floats and marching groups, and then everybody moved up onto the Common and enjoyed a fun time. Children bounced in the Moon Bounce, tried to climb the rope ladder, enjoyed dunking a varied assortment of cheerful bathers in the Snow Twisters' sudden bath contraption, ate hot dogs and cotton candy, and just generally enjoyed a nice old fashioned day.

Bill Haley, from Readville, Mass., won the splendid stereo tape and record player, AM and FM radio, and Malcolm Gould, Sr., of Bethel, won the slalom water ski. It is understood that Mrs. Harold Young won the hundred dollar bill, and there's a nice story of warmth and humanity there. All kinds of kids won awards in doll contests, sack races, among them being Jay Head, Chris Paap, Michelle Angevine, Sally Snyder, Billy Yeo, Lorna Carter, Karen Brooks, Lisa Lane, Scotty Greig, Steve Morrill, Linda Lamb, and Mather Wright. Chris Cason won a prize for a beautiful decorated bicycle, and Leslie Bean and Susan Wade were prize winners also.

It's impossible to thank everyone who gave so generously of time and effort to put on this fine Mollyockett Day. Maurice Blanchard and Malcolm Gould, Jr., ramrodded the effort for the town. Sue Farrar did woman work on the public address system, taping music and keeping people posted, and Frances Saunders and Emily Saunders headed up a fine upper pot on by the Health Council.

Two business concerns who were not mentioned last week because the article had already been filed, were I. E. Davis Lumber Co., and Western Auto. Thanks are expressed for their generous donations.

To them, and to all of the other donors, and to the small army of public spirited, hard working citizens who made Mollyockett Day possible, heartfelt thanks from the Bethel Lions Club. Because of you, some little girl or some little boy who couldn't otherwise afford them, will have the glasses they need to study, and to read, and to see, Bless your bones, all of you.

LOCAL LIBRARY NOW ABLE

ry which will serve the Bethel area is the Lewiston Public Library.

A wide selection of books and magazines are in the collection of talking books. There are 2,500 popular titles on records, more than 3,000 titles on reel-to-reel tapes and several hundred cassette books. There are several current periodicals on eight rpm records including Newsweek, Reader's Digest and the National Geographic. New talking book titles are announced in the bi-monthly magazine already mentioned which is sent to all program participants.

Legislation recently enacted has made it possible for many physically handicapped people to receive without charge the specialized services of the Library of Congress that were formerly restricted to the blind. Patients with impaired eyesight are now eligible. To receive these special reading materials, a person must be unable to utilize ordinary print because of limitations such as blurred or double vision after normal correction; inability to turn pages; inability to hold a book; extreme weakness or excessive fatigue; or any other physical impairment preventing him from reading regular print. Visual loss aids include magnifier view tables, prism type glasses which provide right angle reading for patients unable to hold a book up, electric page turners and many more.

Many people with minor reading difficulties may also be unaware that the library can, through the Maine State Library, procure a wide range of large print books, both for children and adults. The latest catalogue of titles is always available at the library and borrowing a book requires only a phone call from the librarian to the state library. The book or books will be mailed as soon as possible, usually only a few days. The list of titles is long and varied, including westerns, novels of romance and suspense, current best sellers, favorite mysteries and many non-fiction titles.

Application forms for the talking books and visual aid service are available at the library. Mrs. Keniston or one of her assistant librarians will be glad to furnish more information on all of the above services. A phone call to the library is all this requires.

If anyone by mistake picked up a paper bag at the Congregational Church after the Strawberry Festival, containing a pastry cloth and board, rolling pin and flour sieve please return to the Church or Mrs. Ralph Kimball, 824-2061.

In cases where the writer's name is not published, it will be available to those who have a legitimate interest.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR
July 26, 1972

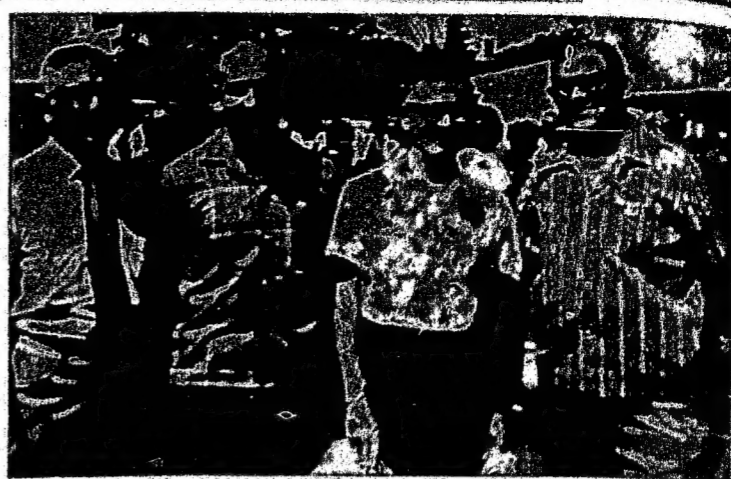

To the Editor:
I would like to express my appreciation to NTL for offering scholarships to Bethel residents in general, and to me in particular.

Last Friday, I completed a two week Basic Human Interaction Lab, and I believe these were two of the most significant weeks of my life. It was a thrilling experience to live in a microcosm in which people were willing to be open, honest and loving. I expect the full impact will take a long time to become part of me.

My fellow delegates and members of the staff welcomed me as a Bethel resident, and expressed a great deal of warmth for the people of the community. They voiced great reluctance to leave our clean air and natural beauty, and envied us who live here.

Again, thank you, NTL. I'm glad your labs are held in Bethel.

Very sincerely,
Betty Tebbets

GREENWOOD CITY

— Mrs. Collette Morgan, Correspondent —

Recently, I took the Baldpate Road and followed it to the top of the hill.

The day was really warm but a breeze was sweeping down into the valley.

The lane wound prettily through the field and forest. As I reached the top and looked back down the lane itself, there was a notable charm in the stretch of overarched trees, a framing drapery of maple, fir and hemlock.

Excellent views of the mountains were at the top and even our little "city" itself was attractive. Between houses the pond sparkled in the sun with its wooded points here and there I could see the old dirt road as it climbed to Patch Mountain. The trees cast interlacing shadows across this dirt stretch. Behind a camera it equaled the beauty of the piling mountains beyond.

Now at my right was a clump of white birches with an unusual straightness of slender trunks. More of these trees should be planted along our highways where their gracefulness could be seen at its best.

At the old place beyond the fields and pastures, there stands the dilapidated remains of an old orchard. Among these ruins against the mountains and to the clouds.

At the left was an old cemetery, the last tie to a dying past. Those who rest on this hillside, once filled with life, here we generations later watch as the forests creep nearer year by year.

I noted the change in the birds' songs since I last came this way. Fewer songs of evening now.

The bees and insects you hear come distinctly if you stop to listen.

Down through the pastures I stopped to look at the steeple which then went toward the forest. I sat in the shade by its side, a solitary person amid a thousand shadows. Then with the purring of the stream came the mellow song of the thrush as they sang a duet together.

Unnumerable echoes filled the valley.

For a time I enjoyed the coolness of the water as I dabbed my toes in it feeling the mossy rocks.

I turned and pushed my way among the trees, down over the hill toward home. I left the gold-finch in their rocking chair.

BARRACKS & AUXILIARY

TO MEET AUG. 1

The Barracks and Auxiliary No. 2343 will meet Tuesday evening, Aug. 1, at the Legion Hall. The committee for August is Marjorie Cummings, Isabelle Croteau and Agnes Chase.

slight, also a certain contentment which I can't explain and that some never find.

I followed the moist and shady gorge among these lovers of the shade, the ferns. How lustrous green they are this summer because of the rains.

Almost everywhere there was a spangle of flowers.

The trees began to thin and the water between was as blue as hyacinths. Little Chippy sat with folded paws waiting by the steps. I should have told him what Patience Strong wrote. . . . "Seek the silent woodland where no sound of wheels is heard and nothing breaks the stillness save the singing of a bird. Nature tells her secrets not to those who hurry by, but to those who walk with happy heart and seeing eye."

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Bowen went home for a few days this week to Massachusetts. On Friday they celebrated their 47th wedding anniversary with relatives and friends.

Several from here attended the Hokala - Baker wedding Saturday evening.

It differs from Ham radio in that it is of more general use to the average citizen and does not require a test to operate it.
